

Brief Under Consideration By Quebec Royal Commission

Gordon Echenberg, Chairman of the SEC, speaking at the news conference held yesterday afternoon. The purpose of the conference was to announce the results of the Sociological survey held last year.

Education Committee Forms For Guidance To Students

At a news conference held yesterday, Gordon Echenberg, Chairman of the Students' Executive Council, announced that a brief consisting of the results of the sociological survey held last year, had been submitted to the Quebec Royal Commission on Education, and was under consideration by them.

He also announced the formation of an Education Committee, presided over by Myron Echenberg under the auspices of NFCUS, having a threefold aim: 1) To improve guidance for high school students in selecting what courses they will take upon entering college; 2) To help mitigate the high freshmen failure rate by providing assistance and advice; 3) To try to improve student-faculty relationships.

Echenberg then proceeded to introduce to the conference the members of the SEC, each of whom made a short speech, and to announce that demolition is now beginning row on the MacTavish Street site of the new Union.

Survey

The survey, conducted by the Sociological Departments of McGill and Sir George Williams, involved more than eight months work in collecting material. More than 1,200 people completed the 28-page questionnaire, but nevertheless the student response, especially at McGill, was disappointing, Echenberg said.

Out of those asked to take part in the survey, only 46% at McGill, 70% at Sir George, and 88% of those at Bishop's actually handed in completed questionnaires. Thus while it is reasonable to assume that the evidence presented for Bishop's represents fairly the experience of students at that university, Echenberg warned that one must be more sceptical of the evidence for Sir George, and very sceptical of the evidence for McGill.

The survey gives evidence on the occupations, incomes, education, and background information on the parents of the university students questioned. Much of this information is classified both by faculty and by university. The survey also tried to discover how students were financing their university educations. Thus a good deal of material is presented on summer jobs, part-time jobs during the academic year, scholarships, and loans. Also expenses for students of each faculty of the three universities are classified. The survey questioned students on their occupational aspirations, and gives figures on what percentage of students plan on going into business, education, government, and so on.

SEC Recommends

At the same time as he announced the results of the survey, Echenberg explained the recommendations of the Students' Society to the Royal Commission, based on the information made available by this survey. He said that the Students' Society has three main recommendations. First of all, it is felt that "increased financial resources must be made available to students, with particular emphasis on long-term, low-interest bearing loans. Although this is a vital necessity, on its own it is far from sufficient. Most important, the Provincial Government must undertake an intensive program designed to inculcate the citizens of Quebec with a full appreciation of the value of a high education in general, and of the status of the student in society in particular."

As a corollary to the above two recommendations, "it is suggested that university facilities be more fully utilized by both the student and the public", and that the university be made the cultural centre of the community.

Be In On The Battle Of The Century

by TAXI

My fellow citizens,

I am speaking to you at this time on a matter of grave concern to our University. A foreign power has threatened the internal security of McGill.

Just one week ago, I received the first reports of a massive buildup of strength on the part of our neighbours and former allies to the west. Since then, I have conferred with the top officials of our government and we have worked unceasingly to determine the course of action which would be in the best interests of our University, which would insure that the principles guaranteed in our Constitution are upheld.

I have learned that Queen's University, one of our closest associates in this hemisphere until only two years ago, is presently engaged in a massive armament program with the announced, yes the announced, intention of suppressing the right which has always been inalienable to the students of McGill University.

That University, through its secret army known as The Golden Gaels, is mobilizing a full scale attack on our representatives who will be attending the conference on peaceful co-existence at Kingston this Saturday. In so doing, they will declare war on McGill.

This situation must not be allowed to exist. McGill expects every man to do his duty. Four score and ten years ago, our forefathers faced the first McGill-Queen's football game with grim determination and a knowledge that their principles were the right ones. It is in this spirit that I speak to you today.

Your government, after very careful consideration, proposes the following measures to protect our security:

First: That the McGill Redmen football team be dispatched to Kingston with explicit instructions to block any Queen's football player carrying offensive weapons from entering the McGill sector of the field.

Second: That every McGill student who possibly can, be present in Kingston, Ontario, Saturday afternoon at 2 pm when the defence of our University's security will be at stake.

This can be effected by purchasing a train ticket at any time after noon today at the Union Box Office for the sum of $8.75, to be used for the defence costs. Of this money, $2 is a bond which must be posted to the railways to cover possible damage. If there is no major damage, this portion of the cost will be refunded.

In addition, students are expected to buy stadium seats which will go on sale tomorrow at a cost of about $1.75 at the same place. Some at $2.00 are available now. The train will leave at about 8:30 am Saturday, and be back in Montreal around 10:30 pm. Complete and final details will be published in the press tomorrow.

MCWA Will Feature Five Study Seminars

The McGill Conference on World Affairs, to be held Wednesday to Saturday, will feature five study seminars as well as the plenary sessions. Held in the form of informal, round-table discussions, the seminars are limited to delegates and conference leaders only.

The first session Thursday morning will deal with the Common Market on a very local level. The delegates will be asked such questions as: What determined membership of the "Six"? Why did Britain not attempt to join the community in 1957? Is the free movement of labour a necessary condition of a common market? If so, what effect will this have on the European community?

In the session Thursday afternoon, the delegates will examine the challenge posed by the European Common Market to Britain, the U.S.A., and Canada. They will be asked to consider the possibilities of trade negotiations between the E.C.M. and the Eastern countries.

The two conference groups on Friday will consider questions relating to France, Germany, and the Atlantic Alliance.

Some of the questions raised will include: Does any Western government seriously entertain the concept of German re-unification? Are De Gaulle and Adenauer pursuing common policies? Is a French-German axis to dominate the New Europe? The delegates will also consider the problem of Berlin and the reasons for De Gaulle's insistence on a French nuclear force.

The final conference group, which meets on Saturday, will try to visualize all these problems within the larger framework of a political federation. Entitled "Political Union, the Common Market, and Britain", this session will be concerned with such matters as: how the question of Britain's entry into the Community affects the Atlantic Alliance, what DeGaulle's concept of the New Europe is, and the value of the European movement led by Jean Monnet and Paul-Henri Spaak.

Attention Newcomers to McGill

All students, at McGill for the first time, who have not had a medical examination at the Health Service, 517 Pine Avenue West, must make an appointment immediately, to avoid a $25.00 fine.

An Important Step

The first student society press conference of this year was held yesterday by the Students' Executive Council for representatives of the press, radio, and television. The news conference was called by the president of the Students' Society to first, introduce the council members, and explain the operations of student government; secondly to announce that demolition of the new union site would begin today; third to report that an SEC committee has been set up to investigate the question of raising Students' Society fees; fourthly, to announce that an Education Committee under the auspices of NFCUS has been set up to help orientate the high school students to academic life at McGill as well as to study student-faculty relationships; and finally, and most important, to introduce the student brief to be presented to the Quebec Royal Commission on Education.

The student brief on education is drawn from a report derived from a survey of students at three English-speaking universities. Notwithstanding the fact that the evidence was gathered by random sampling procedure, and is somewhat less than a definitive statement on the issues covered, certain important considerations have emerged and are embodied in the following three-fold recommendation of the Students' Society of McGill University:

Increased financial resources must be made available to students, with particular emphasis on long-term low-interest bearing loans. Although this is a vital necessity, alone it is far from sufficient.

Most important, the Provincial Government must undertake an intensive program designed to inculcate the citizens of Quebec with a full appreciation of the value of a high education in general, and of the status of the student in society in particular.

As a corollary to the above two recommendations, it is suggested that university facilities be more fully utilized by both the student and the public, and that the university be made the cultural centre.

Now, it may be argued that none of these recommendations embody anything new; that they have all been made and said before; that they represent no particular advance on previous briefs of this type.

However, it should not be ignored that these recommendations are not just momentary considerations, but are grounded in the experience of students analyzed in the sociological survey; that the submission of this brief does not involve just a theoretical exposition but has been accompanied by the organization of an Educational Committee to begin working on these recommendations as well as initiating new ones; and that it has not been presented in its customary manner but has utilized all the available news media in eliciting the necessary consciousness of this study by the community at large.

In this sense an advance has already been made; the very presentation of the brief has already begun "to inculcate the citizens of Quebec with a full appreciation of the value of a high education in general, and of the status of the student in society in particular." An important step forward has been taken.

Montreal's Election

A Report By Sidney Margles

Mr. Margles, a former Newsfeatures Editor of The Daily, is Director of Special Events at CJAD Radio. He is a member of the press gallery at Montreal City Hall and has been observing the political scene for a number of years.

Montreal's politicians this week are in the midst of a bitter campaign that terminates with the civic election on Sunday.

There are four candidates for the mayoralty and 146 for the 45 council seats, so obviously, there will be many disappointed persons this time next week.

For the first time in Montreal's history, the contest for the position in the municipal field is being fought on a party system.

There are three municipal parties—The Civic Party of Montreal, the Citizens Party of Montreal, and the Civic Action League. As well, there are independents seeking election on their own.

Mayor Jean Drapeau—who more than likely will be re-elected to his second consecutive and what is his third term as chief magistrate—leads the Civic Party.

Civic Party

The Civic Party had 45 of the 66 council seats in the outgoing administration, and thus controlled council during the past two years. Members of Mr. Drapeau's party are optimistic and expect a sweep on Sunday.

Former Mayor Senator Sarto Fournier is the figure-head for the Citizens Party, with the main force of the group coming from four politicians, Charles Campeau, one-time city planning director and Member of Parliament; Lucien Croteau, former Leader of Council; Alfred Gagliardi, one-time member of the Executive Committee at City Hall; and Rolland Savignac, a popular veteran councillor.

This group has gathered together many former members of the defunct Greater Montreal Rally which failed miserably in the 1960 election, along with some independents who have decided that working with a party is the only way to get elected.

Oldest Party

The third major grouping is the Civic Action League.

This body has existed for 12 years, and became active in the municipal political field in the 1954 election when it saw its honorary president, Jean Drapeau, swept into office along with many of its members.

In 1957, the citizens rejected both Mr. Drapeau and most of the C.A.L. candidates, while in the last election, in 1960, the population turned completely against the League, which failed to elect a single member to office. Its mayoralty candidate this year is an architect, Colonel Paul Lambert.

It may be recalled that Mayor Drapeau was an active member of this party, but split with it following differences with the president, Pierre Desmarais, a former member of the Executive Committee.

It was as a result of this break with the C.A.L. that the Civic Party was formed on the eve of the 1960 election.

Important Group

The independents—mostly in the city's west end—constitute an important block, with many of them expected to be re-elected, they may very well hold the balance of power in the next city council.

The opening guns have been fired by the three parties. The "ins", the Civic Party, is basing its campaign on accomplishments. The "outs", the Citizens Party and the Civic Action League, are mainly attacking the administration and saying what they could do if in power.

But the major portion of the campaigning takes place this week, and by Sunday, the propaganda machines will have ground out much food for thought.

Revised Map

Montrealers—and there are 349 thousand eligible voters—will be asked to cast their ballots under a revised electoral map.

A voter will select one from among the mayoralty candidates, and will vote for one man in each of three seats of his district.

An elector is a taxpayer, and it is for this reason that most Montrealers actually don't vote. It is usually the head of the household who has the right to express his opinion.

To complicate matters, there will be two referendums on election day. One is on the subject of the council term of office and the other deals with a voter's identification card.

For City Clerk Gabriel Morin, who is the Chief Returning Officer, the tabulation of results is the least of his problems, with his authority stretching over the entire election, from the establishing of locations for polls to the hiring of nearly 4 thousand persons for work on the election day.

As mentioned earlier, this is a history-making election because of the party system, but this is also the first time in Montreal that a woman has sought the chief magistrate's post.

Two Firsts

Miss Louise Parent—at this time—is still opposing the three party men, and while few if any think she will be elected, no one will deny that she should muster several thousand votes.

Another first is being marked in the election day itself—Sunday. Never before in Montreal has the population been asked to cast a ballot on the Lord's Day.

It was the hope of the administration that a Sunday voting day would help reduce irregularities to a minimum and increase the percentage of voters. This will be known along with the election results late Sunday night.

It's Fun.

Meeting To Choose Bishop's Debaters

A compulsory meeting for all novices in the Debating Union Training Program will be held at one o'clock today in Room W260 of the Arts Building.

At this meeting the debaters who will represent McGill at the Inter-collegiate Tournament at Bishop's University this weekend will be chosen. In addition, Mark Feifer, Treasurer of the Debating Union, will talk on the pros and cons of intercollegiate debating.

In this talk, Feifer will also deliver a critique of the preliminary debates which have been held so far. The results of these debates will also be announced.

"Attendance at this meeting is absolutely compulsory for all novices", Feifer said, "as the novice will here be given a chance to learn in practical application what is right and what is wrong in debating".

"Also at this all-important meeting the novices will be given ample opportunity to ask questions concerning debating theory and debating in general" Mr. Feifer went on to say.

In addition, a debate will take place on November 13 between McGill and a British team consisting of debaters from Oxford and Leeds. Representing McGill will be Students' Society President Gordon Echenberg and Daily Editor-in-Chief Irwin Cotler.

Cotler and Echenberg have previously met and defeated the foremost debating teams in North America.

Tonight Sees Start Of Saint John's First Aid Courses

The first class of the Saint John's Ambulance First Aid Course, sponsored by the McGill Pre-Medical Society, will take place tonight, at 7 pm in Room 21 of the Biology Building.

The Course will last for a period of eight weeks — October 23 to December 11 — and will be held every Tuesday from 7 to 9 pm. The fee of $1.00, for books and bandages, will be collected at this time from those who haven't already paid. There is still room for those interested, even if they have not previously signed up. This course is open to all McGill students, not only those in the Pre-Medical Society.

Police Insulted; U of T Apologizes

The University of Toronto student council, the SAC, has apologized to local police on behalf of certain students who "directed insulting remarks towards a Negro policewoman" at the Toronto-Queen's game October 6.

Such comments as "Take it off, nigger cop!" and "This time we're going to kill six million niggers" sparked wide controversy on campus and in the public press. The issue involved not only discrimination, but the whole problem of rowdiness at football games, and in particular, rowdiness caused by members of fraternities.

The U of T does not recognize fraternities. The students who made the discriminatory remarks are members of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Editorial

An editorial in the Varsity pointed out that "since the SAC does not recognize fraternities, it must be assumed that the apologies were made on behalf of all students of the University."

"It is regrettable that a particular fraternity was singled out and made the scape-goat for the guilt of many. It is even more unfortunate that Delta Tau Delta has been tried—often in absentia—by the press, radio and television."

The letter of apology took the same point of view, saying that "the remarks were... The boorish caterwauling of a few ignorant and drunken youngsters."

Reforms

At the same time, the SAC addressed another letter to the U of T Athletic Association, which receives all income from student attendance at football games and is responsible for student conduct.

The letter recommended that "further measures be taken to insure the maintenance of law and good order in the stadium." It said that the SAC Advisory Committee on Discipline is supported by the top executive body of the University, and that the SAC act on any incidents reported to it by the Athletic Association.

"It may be," the letter concluded, "that extra police or searches of students may be required."

THE SNOWMAN

All too often, some of the genuinely outstanding plays in a football game are passed over in the press. Likewise, some of the men who have made important contributions to the effort go unmentioned. The delimiting factors are usually space and continuity but of course, this doesn't exonerate the situation. Herewith we present some of Saturday's names and situations that merit recognition.

The First Quarter

Jim Young, Queen's hard running, very fast fullback takes a swing pass on the Queen's 40. The blocks mow down the Redmen and one man is left standing—defensive halfback Steve Longstaff. Young is 20 pounds heavier than Longstaff and perhaps somewhat faster. Longstaff knocks the Gaels rookie out of bounds on the McGill 45, closing off the path to smooth sailing down the sideline.

Connor goes back to pass on the Queen's 43. Al MacKenzie wracks him up and recovers a fumble on the Queen's 29. This play is exemplary of the tough time MacKenzie, Zelko, Blair, Feidler and company gave the highly touted Connor all afternoon.

The Second Quarter

It's a second-and-three situation on the Queen's 33. Connor flips a swing pass to Edwards and the blocking starts to form. Gavin Wyllie, playing his first game at the corner for the Redmen fights off his block and puts the clamps on Edwards to dish out a four-yard loss.

Don Taylor runs a pattern, looks in and snares a Skypeck bullet with one hand. Might we add that he was falling at the time, away from the direction of the ball.

Jim Young is picking up speed as he hits a good size hole in the line. Dick Feidler's forearm finds the mark on Young's shin and topples the fullback like a ten-pin.

The Second Half

On a second-and-nine effort, Ritchie snares a swing pass from Connor. He takes a step or two forward and is ground into the dirt by Feidler who has jumped over a block and has come 10 yards laterally to make the tackle.

Connor throws a swing pass to Young on a second-and-six effort from midfield. Wyllie, playing a tight defence cuts Young down for a one-yard loss and forces the punt.

From the McGill 43, Connor throws to Ritchie. The halfback bobbles the poorly thrown pass and before he can get another stab at it, rookie linebacker Sal Lovecchio takes his feet out from under him to break up the play.

On a first-and-ten from the Redmen 29, Connor looks for Sirman. The throw is picked off on a fine interception by Fraser Allan to stymie a Gaels threat.

Monteith Breaks Out

This has been a difficult season for Ian Monteith. The big fullback came to training camp with a starting job at fullback pretty well sewn up. Then came Leon Abbott and all of a sudden, the 1961 starter was collecting splinters on the bench.

Abbott was forced into playing a corner when injuries and the depth problem befell the Redmen. Monteith got little or no opportunity to show his stuff against the Varsity Blues. On Saturday, Skypeck gave Monteith his chance.

The Toronto product reacted as though he had just been released from solitary confinement. He used his rock solid 205 pounds to batter his way through the middle of the line for big chunks of real estate. In one instance he turned a would-be routine gain into a 21-yard advance by bashing his way through three potential tacklers.

He also showed the 7,000 fans some dash in the open field fighting off defenders with rugged straight arms. On the first play from scrimmage in the second half, he sprinted, shifted and powered his way for 57 yards for the game's outstanding single effort along the ground. Keep hammering Shotgun!

Why We Won

Frank Tindall told us that the Redmen won because "they were better in every department." The important fact here was that the McGill squad really mixed it up and physically punished the Gaels. Their tackles were sure and three or four men were in for the kill every time. That's the way we won and the only way we'll continue to win; none of this patsy jazz—just hit, hit, hit!

Papa Willie

Willie Lambert is the proud father of a son born on Sunday. The child weighed seven pounds plus. The pressure exerted on Willie by the fact that his wife was 10 days overdue on Saturday was concealed by Lambert's usual versatile, outstanding game at halfback. Congratulations to the families of mother and father and to McGill's brilliant new recruiting program.
